

All of the devices inside the dashed box belong to the CA3096 transistor array chip. Note: None of the devices are internally connected; connections between the array's transistors must be made externally.

This triangle-to-sine converter is a modified version of Thomas Henry's design.

